Chalke Deanery

David Henley: Following 8 years as a regular officer in the Royal Navy, I trained at Salisbury. Ordained in 1972, I served in the Portsmouth Diocese for 30 years, the last 24 years in rural parishes. I was also Rural Dean in two different deaneries. I came as Team Rector of the Chalke Valley in 2002 and have been Rural Dean of Chalke since 2007. Divorced in 2000, I have two married sons and four grandchildren. I married Margaret, a retired doctor, in 2008. I am an optimist for the long-term future of the rural church in this country, but am very conscious for the need for imaginative changes and pressures that places on us as serving clergy.

(She also went to Lindisfarne and Venice during her time away!) Alison is single so a good work - life balance doesn't come easy, though good friends and her garden keep her sane. She is now beginning to prepare for retirement and life after parish ministry!

Salisbury Deanery

David Durston has served in parishes in Wolverhampton, West Bromwich and the Wylve Valley. He has worked in continuing ministerial development in Lichfield and Salisbury dioceses and with the Grubb Institute. His approach to Ministry Review is to create a space for reflection in a way that is not often possible in the busyness of everyday life. In this space new thoughts and ideas about ways forward can emerge. Sometimes the spectator can see things those who are involved in the situation have not seen. That makes it possible to Re-View Ministry, and this can lead to a deeper understanding of what is required, and a clearer discernment of God's call to action.
